Plan Now to Prevent Cold Weather Stress

A high percentage of the U.S. beef herd resides in areas of the country where moderately to extremely cold winter temperatures are common, according to a press release by Bob Larson of Kansas State University.

By planning for winter weather, ranchers can avoid being caught off-guard by extreme events and can manage the typical winter conditions so cattle do not have to continually utilize body fat as an energy source to keep warm – leading to excessive loss of body condition.

Situations that are most likely to cause cold stress are cattle with thin fat cover and short hair coats (due to movement from a warmer environment to a colder environment or extremely cold temperatures early in the winter season) cattle with wet hides, or high wind speed accompanying cold temperatures.

Wind chill is a better predictor of cold stress than temperature alone because cold wind draws heat away more quickly than still air at the same temperature. Wet or mud-caked hair loses its ability to insulate the animal, and a wet winter hair coat only provides as much protection from the cold as a typical summer hair coat.

If cold wind is combined with a wet hair coat (as can occur during a winter storm), the effects can be very profound.

Adult cattle with a dry hair coat, adequate body condition and abundant, adequate-quality forage can withstand most winter situations, especially if they have the ability to find protection from wind and have been exposed to moderately cold conditions for several weeks, which allows them to acclimate by growing a thick winter hair coat and increasing feed intake.

As temperatures drop, cattle increase heat production which means the number of calories they need for maintenance increases. This increase is met by consuming more feed and moving it through the digestive tract faster, but the cost of this faster movement is that feed is not digested as fully.

The effect of needing increased calories for maintenance at the same time that feed digestibility is decreasing means that if cows do not have access to plenty of digestible feed, they will have to “burn” body fat as a calorie source.

Another factor that can limit feed intake in winter conditions is if water sources are frozen or unavailable.

If feed intake cannot keep up with energy demands, and body fat is mobilized to meet energy demand, then the cows will have less fat insulation and will be more susceptible to cold temperatures – causing a vicious cycle that can lead to cold stress and even more weight loss.

Cold weather brings a special concern with bulls because of the potential to have frostbite damage to the scrotum and testicles. It is important that bulls have protection from the wind and adequate bedding if they are housed on concrete or dirt.

Cold temperatures have the greatest potential to cause serious problems in young calves, particularly calves in the first day of life. Because calves are born wet, have thick skin and very little body fat, they lose body heat rapidly and if they are not able to become dry, they can quickly become severely cold stressed. Contact with snow or wet ground will increase the amount of time a calf stays wet and in danger. Body temperature of newborn calves can drop to dangerously low levels in three hours or less.

Calves are born with a body temperature of about 100° F. When exposed to a cold environment, calves are able to produce heat in two ways, by shivering and the heat production of brown fat (fat that surrounds the kidneys of a newborn). They can conserve heat by reducing blood flow to the body surface and extremities (feet, ears, etc.).

In early stages of cold exposure, calves will shiver vigorously and have a fast heart rate and breathing rate. If that does not keep the body temperature up, the calf's body sends less blood to feet, ears and nose in an effort to minimize heat loss.

Severe cold stress occurs when the body temperature drops below 94°F. At this temperature, the brain and other organs are affected and the calf becomes depressed, unable to rise, unwilling to suckle and will temporarily lose the ability to shiver.

The good news is that if the calf can be warmed-up and its body temperature can begin to rise, the shivering response will return and the core body temperature will slowly increase.

During periods of cold or wet weather, newborn calves (less than 1 to 2 days of age) should be checked every few hours with a thermometer, and any calf with a below-normal temperature, even if it appears OK, should be warmed. Calves suffering from cold stress must be warmed to ensure the body temperature can rise above 100°F.

If body temperature has not dropped too far, putting the calf in the cab of a pickup, out of the wind and rain or snow, will warm the calf. In more severe cases, the calves can be placed in warm water, specially designed warming boxes, or near a heat source such as an electric blanket, heat lamp or hot water bottles. To avoid skin burns, the heat source should not exceed 108°F.

In addition to an external heat source, cold-stressed calves should be fed warm colostrum, milk or electrolyte fluid with an energy source using an esophageal feeder.

Prevention of cold stress involves management to ensure that the calves can be born in a short period of time and both the calf and dam can stand shortly after calving so that they can bond and the calf can begin suckling. Anything that prolongs calving or reduces the chance that a calf will suckle soon after birth should be addressed by management changes.

Calving difficulties are minimized by proper heifer development, proper bull selection for calving ease and proper nutrition so that heifers and cows calve in a body condition score of 5 to 6 on a 9-point scale. Cows with large teats or that are not attentive mothers should be culled.

Use of pasture as the primary forage source during calving encourages cows to keep spread apart and minimizes development of muddy areas. If the herd forage plan includes feeding hay, consider feeding hay in early to mid-gestation and saving stockpiled pasture for the calving season. If supplemental hay and grain are fed during calving, these should be provided at locations that are separate and distant from water sources and windbreaks.

I discourage the use of bale rings in calving and nursery pastures and suggest that if you are using large round bales, they be unrolled and the feeding area changed with each feeding. Unrolled bales will have greater hay waste, but a reduced chance for mud caused by concentrating the herd into small feeding areas, and unrolled hay provides bedding for newborn calves so that they are not in direct contact with the ground.

Minimizing the effects of cold temperatures on newborn calves involves planning ahead and considering calf comfort and protection when making heifer development, bull selection, nutrition and pasture management decisions.

COVERING GROUND ...

By Dean Summerbell

Old friends Dean Summerbell, Terry Fox, and Bill Helton had a great time talking about the 1960s the night before the Thomas sale. Terry was a star pitcher for the Detroit Tigers in those years. Terry, of New Iberia, LA, was a buyer at the Thomas Fullblood Dispersal in Damascus, AR.

First of all, Happy New Year to all of you. We hope that 2022 brings Health, Happiness, & Prosperity. Below, I have included just a brief recap of the November and December sales and events, which were very positive months.

November started with the Thomas Farms Fullblood Dispersal Sale in Damascus, Arkansas. Rick and Sandy

Thomas of Leslie, Arkansas, enjoyed a great sale. Next came the Iowa annual meeting in Ames, Iowa. A very good crowd attended along with a great number of juniors. The following week was the Heart of Missouri Sale near Lebanon, Missouri. This sale was held in a new venue, where a good crowd of commercial and seedstock breeders bid in person, online and by phone, providing the biggest sale average in recent memory. The Saturday after Thanksgiving was Bob and Mary Bosch's private treaty sale. They also received a good crowd of bidders who, through active bidding, provided one of their best sales.

The "A Night of the Town" Sale was held December 11th at the Bellagio Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas, Nevada. The sale had active bidding from the internet and phone calls as well as the nice crowd that came not only for the sale but also all the other events during the week of the National Finals Rodeo.

I started 2021 being released from Mercy Hospital in Coon Rapids after suffering from COVID pneumonia. I used oxygen for two months before my system improved enough to not need the external help. I only missed the first sales in 20 years was rather devastating to someone who does not get sick very often. I am thankful that I survived and along with Beverly, we are able to plan for the upcoming sales and events in the Heartland.

I want to call attention to a tragic fire in west central Kansas the third week of December. The wild fire literally destroyed everything in its path driven by 100 mph winds that killed thousands of cattle. It was devastating to the ranchers as their cattle either burned to death or had to be put down because their burns were too severe to heal. The town of Paradise,

Kansas, was totally obliterated. It has been estimated that nearly 400,000 acres burned in just one day. Producers lost their livelihoods and are trying to pick up the pieces of a fractured life. The storm impacted a portion of our Limousin family. Seedstock producers and commercial cattlemen alike need our support.

For those who can help with feed and hay to help the area ranchers take care of what is left, any help or donation would be greatly appreciated. The Heartland Regional Stockyards in Plainville, Kansas, is serving as a coordinating agent to handle the support that is so desperately needed.

With the upper Midwest drought and dormant winter dead grass, we need to be extra diligent to protect against inclement conditions. Hopefully 2022 can bring more of a normal weather pattern, which we need. Normality is a desired way of life that we so richly deserve.

I would like to express condolences and sympathy to the family of Warren Enger who passed away December 15th. The Limousin producer of Ellsworth, Wisconsin, was a good friend and supporter of the Heartland and especially, Limousin cattle.

Finally, with all of the 2021 distractions of weather, illness, and political divides, we in the Heartland are tough Americans who by the grace of our Father, will endure and continue to provide safe and healthy Limousin beef for the table.

Beverly and I are looking forward to seeing you down the road!

"On the Road Again"

By Bev Summerbell

This past year has been an "interesting one", to say the least. It all started in December of 2021 when Dean was diagnosed with COVID pneumonia. He was in the hospital for a week, released on January 1st, and then on oxygen for another two months. Unfortunately, we had to miss some sales because of his breathing problems. We were hoping that as time went on, the breathing would get better. He still struggles with stamina problems—doctors call it COVID Long Hauler. Despite these problems, we have been carrying on with our job. We are just thankful we are doing as well as we are at this time.

As we start the new year, I found this "To Do List" and thought it was appropriate for all that we have been going through this past year:

MY TO-DO LIST:

- Count my blessings.
- Let go of what I can't control.
- Don't overthink.
- Love people without neglecting myself.
- Walk away from drama.
- Appreciate people, not things.
- Follow my passion.
- Make time to make my soul happy.
- Forgive others, forgive myself.
- Breathe. Everything will be okay.

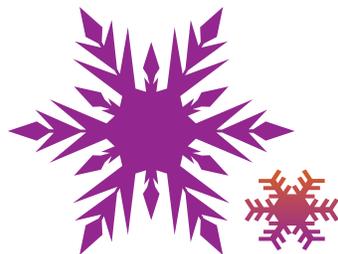

After rereading the things on this list, I feel very grateful for all the blessings that we have. Dean and I have been able to meet so many wonderful people across the United States through our association with the Limousin breed and the Heartland Limousin Association. We've enjoyed many meals with our Limousin friends, and we are so appreciative of all the people who have opened up their homes and invited us to spend the night. We never imagined, when we started the job in August of 2001, the opportunities we would have working for HLA. It's been a wonderful experience!

After 34 years of teaching, Dean and I are thankful that even though we may not be in the classroom working with students, we still get the joy of watching our Limousin juniors grow and develop over the years. We are so proud of them; whether they are in the show ring, working with other juniors, or helping out wherever they may be needed.

We were pleased with the new venue, the Nebraska Beef Expo, for the Heartland Regional Show this past June. It gave the juniors an opportunity to not only compete in the showing but also in a variety of satellite events. We thought the NALJA show in Grand Island was a very successful event. The volunteers who stepped up to prepare and serve the meals, decorate the arena and judge the satellite events went above and beyond to make sure that the juniors and their families had a memorable week in Nebraska.

Now that sale season is in full swing, we are enjoying the opportunity to reconnect with seedstock and commercial cattlemen at production and consignment sales.

It's always great to visit with them, discussing their operation, and looking toward the future.

Dean and I enjoyed a week in Las Vegas. We were very lucky to be able to attend two nights of the National Finals Rodeo on Tuesday and Thursday. We had great seats both nights and if you've ever been to the NFR, you know how special it is being able to attend in person. We also went to South Point and the Golden Nugget to watch the live stream on their big screens. The week ended with the "A Night on the Town" sale at the Bellagio. That is always a highlight of the year!

We look forward to seeing everyone in 2022 and serving breeders in the new year!

Dean & Bev Summerbell enjoyed two nights at the NFR rodeo in Las Vegas.

The grand entry of the participants at the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas December 6.

Recipe of the Month

Many of you probably have this recipe, but it is a favorite of our Limousin friends so I wanted to share it with you. It is a very old recipe, probably one that your Grandma made. It was a hit with those attending the NALJA award banquet in Grand Island.

The scholarship recipients were recognized at the annual Kansas Livestock Association Convention December 1, 2021, in Wichita. A total of $30,000 was presented by the Kansas Livestock Foundation and its partners. The Kansas Livestock Foundation was established in 1983 to operate solely and exclusively for charitable, scientific and educational purposes.

"I am very honored to have received a KLF Merck Cartridges for Cash Scholarship," Falk said. "I have always had a passion for working with livestock and large animal medicine. I hope to one day work in either a mixed or large animal clinic in rural Kansas. I am very grateful to the Kansas Livestock Foundation for presenting me this scholarship," said Brooke.

Kansas Ranchers Continue Recovery from Wildfire

Ranchers in west-central Kansas, faced extreme weather conditions on December 15, 2021, when winds clocking upwards of 100 mph pushed wildfires across the area. The conditions unfolded very fast, giving the ranchers very little time to plan, move cattle and try to secure buildings and equipment.

The ranchers are still picking up the pieces from the strong derecho-style winds that made fires spread through wheat fields and pastures. Several herds of cattle were unable to escape the inferno. Ranches in the Russell area were turned to piles of ashes.

One rancher said that with 105 mph winds, there was fire everywhere and it was pretty scary. The high winds forced over many power lines, and with the already dry conditions, it sparked wildfires in minutes. Thousands of acres of pasture burned up, multiple homes were lost and the losses will be well into the millions. Ranchers lost fencing, hay supplies, homes, barns and livestock.

Nebraska ranchers, along with many others in the agriculture community, have stepped up to help, bringing much needed hay and supplies to the area. The Kansas Livestock Foundation is working to deploy resources, distribute donations of hay, stockwater tanks, fencing supplies and more. The Heartland Regional Stockyards in Plainville, Kansas, is the distribution center for hay and supplies. Other sites taking donations are the Russell County Livestock Facility of Russell, Kansas, and Lane County in Dighton, Kansas.

Center in Cheyenne, Wyoming. Kansas and Nebraska Limousin/Lim-Flex breeders took part in this event. The Expo featured junior and open shows, showmanship competitions, sales, and a trade show.

This Expo was formed by a small group of ranchers for ranchers. The event is aimed at preserving our nation's western heritage, giving stockmen from across the country to opportunity to showcase and promote elite genetics.

The weekend was filled with youth events including: educational opportunities, a judging competition, a fitting contest, knowledge bowl, recognition of the Beef Ambassadors, junior shows and a sale. One of the highlights of the weekend is the Minnesota Youth Beef Experience Program (MYBEP). This year ten Juniors were given a heifer, donated by several breeds, to take care of, breed and bring back to show in next year's Expo. At the end of the year, the heifer then becomes part of their herd.

The Expo has been proud to serve the Midwest beef industry since 2000, and they are glad to be back this year. The mission of the Expo is to celebrate and promote the beef industry while providing an exceptional educational forum for producers, industry professionals and youth.

State Fair Beef Complex Delayed

According to a report in the September 3, 2021, Sioux Falls Argus Leader, the project to rebuild the South Dakota State Fair Beef Complex has been delayed at least a year. There is a large backorder on steel, about 52 weeks out, that will set back the completion of the $22 million rodeo hall and livestock barn.

Lt. Governor Larry Rhoden and state fair officials gathered during this year's fair for a ceremonial groundbreaking celebration. The Dakota Events Complex – dubbed the DEX for short – replaces the half-century old Open Class Beef Complex that was destroyed in a fire last year. The new 150,000-square-foot multi-purpose livestock complex, which seats 5,000, has the capacity to host two full-size equestrian arenas, larger livestock shows and concerts. The original plan was to have the new facility completed and ready for the 2022 State Fair in Huron. Officials are now hoping that it will be finished in time for the 2023 State Fair.

A great crowd checked out the new sale venue at the Heart of Missouri Sale.

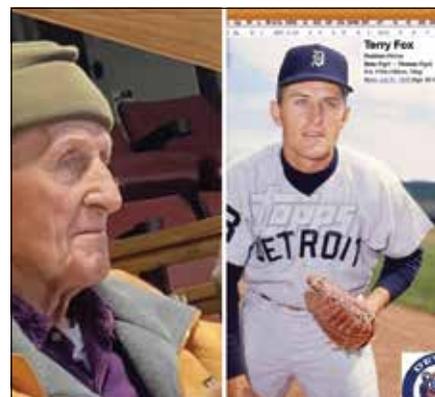

It was great to see Mary Quigley of Oklahoma City, OK, who clerked the Thomas Dispersal Sale in Damascus, AR.

Old friends and former Limousin World reps Dan Wedman and Mark Smith were ringmen at the Linhart sale near Leon, IA.

IA juniors had fun watching Dave Book of Logan try to complete one of the games at the annual meeting.

Terry Fox of New Iberia, LA, attended the Thomas Dispersal Sale. He was a professional baseball player for many years!

The Linhart Ladies; Heather, Sara and Lana, prepared and served a great lunch on sale day. Your hard work is appreciated!

"BACK IN TIME" Do You Know the Answer?

Dean and I attended the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas the week of December 5-11, 2021. One of the features of the nightly rodeos is the introduction of the rodeo queens from the United States and Canada. They proudly ride around the arena prior to the grand entry of the participants. As I watched the rodeo queens in the arena, it got me thinking about the Limousin queens that we had back in the early days of our breed. Their role, as a Limousin queen, was to serve as ambassadors of the breed. They were judged on their knowledge of the Limousin breed and the cattle business along with their speaking ability.

Limousin queen candidates at the 1981 competition.

Can you answer these questions?

- 1.) What year was the first Limousin queen crowned?
- 2.) Can you name her and her hometown?
- 3.) According to the book "The History of Limousin in North America", who was the queen in 1987-88?
- 4.) Where was the 1987-88 queen from? Her parents are still active in the Limousin breed.
- 5.) Where was the queen competition held?
- 6.) Who were the two ladies who organized and started the queen program?

See answers on page 42

Tammy and Andy Schmalshof, ATAK Limousin, of Avon, IL, enjoyed talking with sale consultant Bill Helton and HLA Executive Secretary Dean Summerbell at the Heart of Missouri sale on November 20.

South Dakotans Dale McLellan of Lantry and Jim Schott of Mobridge took in the NFR rodeo and the Night on the Town sale in Las Vegas.

2021 Limousin Champions of the World

The “Champion of the World” Competition was founded in 2012 as a way to promote awareness, goodwill and trade between cattle producing countries around the world. In 2021, more than 1,850 entries from 91 countries representing 16 different breeds were evaluated by 42 different judges.

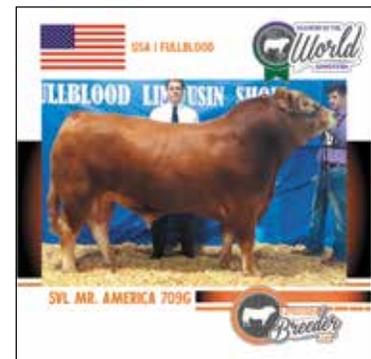

The Limousin Champion of the World competition started in 2016. The idea was to include cattle from the entire Limousin family of breeds to help profile the diversity of genetics and breed-types within Limousin as well as a profile what trends and success were occurring worldwide. Entries from Fullblood and purebred Limousin are accepted. In 2021, because of COVID, where a lot of countries did not have cattle shows, entries were accepted from the general public with a panel of four judges selecting a bull and a female to represent each country.

The 2021 “Limousin – Miss North America” champions were crowned and the United States took home the “Gold and Silver” awards. Mexico received the “Bronze” medal.

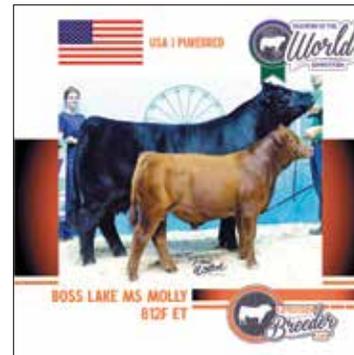

The Silver award winner in the “Miss North American” contest went to a Fullblood.

CCRA Lady Sarah, a 7/14/13 daughter of CFSV Polled Newstar out of CCRA Luvs Fantasy is owned by Betty Anglani, Cedar Creek Ranch of Thornfield, Missouri.

The Gold winner in the “Champion of North America” contest was SVL Mr. America, a 6/2/19 son of Posthaven Polled Yellowstone out of SVL Polled Amazing 971Z. He is owned by Carter Kitchens of Stone Valley Limousin, Cashion, Oklahoma. He went on to be selected as the Bronze award winner in the “Champion of the World” competition.

The Gold award winner in the female competition was a purebred, Boss Lake Ms Molly 812F ET, a 2/5/18, black, homozygous polled daughter of Cottage Lake Border Agent out of AUTO Olga 498A. She is owned by Wiley Fanta, son of Casey and Kelly Fanta of Starbuck, Minnesota. She went on to be selected as the Silver award winner in the “Champion of the World” competition.

Heitor Lutti, Jose Medina, Kirree Kermodé and Mark McKenzie served on the panel of judges for this prestigious competition.

Linhart Limousin Sells into 18 States

Linhart Limousin of Leon, Iowa, held their 12th Annual “Fall Harvest Production Sale” Saturday, October 23, 2021, at their Sale Facility near Leon, Iowa. This sale reflected many of their premier donor cow families, elite herd sires, and a progressive A.I. program. ## In Memoriam

Warren Jay Enger, 81, of El Paso Township, Ellsworth, Wisconsin, passed away December 15, 2021, following an acute abdominal aortic aneurysm. A Celebration of Life is being planned for the spring, which was Warren's favorite time of the year, when the land comes to life. More information will be posted in the spring. From seedlings sprouting out of the ground to a newborn calf's first steps, it brought him the greatest pleasure watching his farm come to life.

He was born in Madison, Minnesota, attended school in Garfield Township and graduated from West Central School of Agriculture. Warren received his bachelor's degree in agriculture from the University of Minnesota-Morris. Following graduation, he joined the Peace Corps, working in Niger for two years and later, working on the staff in Malaysia. Upon returning to the U.S., he went on to further his education at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Warren launched a company called Africare, assisting with the development of rural Africa. He then went on to work with another company called RONCO Consulting Corporation, creating agricultural programs and training local residents in countries such as Mali, Zambia, Jamaica, Egypt, Niger, and many more. He was able to teach many in agribusiness and renewable resource development.

Warren loved knowledge, and he strived to understand history and how things worked. He enjoyed looking out at his farm, Green Fields Crossing. It was never work, rather a joy to tend to his Limousin cattle and everything that came with farm life. He was a member of the Limousin Association of Wisconsin and the Heartland Limousin Association. Warren and his wife, Pamela, spent time traveling to England and Europe, exploring castles, palaces, and places of historical sufferance.

He is survived by his wife Pamela, and many other family and friends. The O'Connell Family Funeral Home in Ellsworth, Wisconsin, will take care of the future Memorial Service and memorials.

Grazing Fescue Requires Close Monitoring

We all have that one friend who eats the spiciest food and doesn't seem bothered by it, while the rest of the people at the table break out into a sweat from the heat of the food. That friend has adapted well to the spice, and they handle it with ease.

Much like humans, beef cattle can adapt over time to their grazing sources with proper management, but there are certain forages that can present issues for cattle, according to experts at Kansas State University's Beef Cattle Institute.

Talking on a recent Cattle Chat podcast, veterinarians Bob Larson and Brad White talked with beef cattle nutritionist Phillip Lancaster about the risks to cattle when grazing fescue.

"Fescue is a cool-season grass that is drought tolerant and a good grazing option for cattle that are well adapted, but it can be infected with an endophyte that can make cattle sick when they are first introduced to it," White said.

An endophyte is a fungus that lives within the plant.

He added that the endophyte causes changes in the blood flow to the peripheries of the animal, such as their hooves, tails and ears. In the summer, cattle that aren't well adapted to fescue have trouble cooling, and in the winter, they are more prone to frostbite, White said.

"Cattle that are experiencing fescue toxicity will often have rough-appearing hair coats that don't shed off, and they will not gain weight well," Larson said.

Lancaster said that cattle raised on fescue pastures tend to handle the toxin better than those who have never been exposed to it.

"Over time we've selected animals

"BACK IN TIME" Do You Know the Answer?

Answers:

- 1.) The first Limousin queen served from 1971-72.
- 2.) Gloria Jennings of Highmore, South Dakota, was selected as the first Limousin queen.
- 3.) Cinde Schuppe was named queen for 1987-88.
- 4.) She is from Iliff, Colorado. Her parents, Gordon and Earline Schuppe, are still actively involved in the Limousin breed.
- 5.) The queen competition was held during the NALF convention and annual meeting.
- 6.) South Dakotans Marilyn Rinehart of Highmore and Eva Oxandaburu of Huron took the lead getting the junior and queen programs started.

NALF President Bob Purdue is pictured with Gloria Jennings of Highmore, SD, the first Limousin queen in the United States.

in those environments that are more naturally adapted and tolerant of the endophyte toxin, so the challenge is not as great for them," he said.

If producers notice cattle experiencing toxicity from fescue, the experts agree the only option is to remove them from the pasture.

"There is no treatment for the vasoconstriction that is leading to the cattle's poor performance and so the only choice is to get them off the fescue and provide some other forage or feed that will allow them to clear the toxin," Lancaster said, adding it typically takes 6-8 weeks to fully clear their system.
